Certificate in Blockchain Technology

About the course

The world of computing is at a stage of evolution that is very complex and unpredictable. It is no longer being completely driven by large enterprises, it is also being driven in part by individuals and end users.

Blockchain is a disruptive force in multiple areas of the business enterprise, business to individual, governance and social transactions. It prompted the genesis of Bitcoin, a completely decentralized digital payment system about nine years ago and is now being proposed as an organized solution to a large set of problems facing business and society. Today is a unique stage in the growth of blockchain technology, as the industry and experts are visualizing various use cases that are made possible by blockchain.

This certification course is suitable for technology and business professionals who want to understand the methodology of blockchain and its application across industries. The core concepts and blockchain platform, its growth and evolution and all the use cases it is relevant to are discussed in detail. At the same time all the foundational elements of building applications on Ethereum, Hyperledger and Quorum are presented. The code samples that are demonstrated are available with the course content for download.
